EDEN ALTERNATIVE AT HOME

RESPITE RESOURCES

RESPITE REQUIREMENTS

It's that time of year again—Summer! Most schools have completed their instructional terms, the legislature is not in session and families are trying to figure out how they can get a few days of rest and relaxation into a Summer vacation.

Caregivers are no exception to desiring some time off from duties to be able to enjoy some time at the beach, read a good book, take a trip somewhere... just be able to get away from the constant demands that caregiving places on them.

This month's issue of our newsletter features the topic of respite. Respite is simply the time off from normal duties that allows a person to re-charge and return to their duties rested and ready to resume their tasks. Without respite a person becomes too tired, both physically and emotionally and often simply burns-out and can become unable to handle the pressures of caregiving.

The tragedies that are sometime heard about in caregiving situations are often the result of burned-out caregivers who find themselves unable to continue to function effectively as caregivers and may see no escape. Violence towards their care receiver can occur, and more often the level of care declines to the point of neglect.

As a community, we all have a responsibility to recognize the needs of this vital service that is rendered to our elderly population primarily by family caregivers. We have to be creative and responsive in developing programs and procedures that can allow caregivers to recognize the signs of burn-out and find appropriate respite services.

Someone once said that a society can be judged by the level of care it renders it elderly. Let's make certain Hawaii is judged positively.

OUTREACH SERVICES

Pres. Lee, Cassandra Stewart, Michelle Jenks,
 2nd VP Rachel Sato

When their loved ones required nursing home care, many of our caregivers quickly learned that applying for Medicaid coverage could be a confusing, lengthy process.

Outreach Services began in 1987 on the mainland by helping underinsured patients and their hospitals with Medicaid benefits. The company now has offices in several mainland locations and in Hawaii.

Staff members, under contract with health-care institutions, serve as patient and facility advocates, forming a liaison between the client and government agencies in order to simplify and expedite the benefit process.

Cassandra Stewart, Director of Outreach Services in Hawaii, has over 15 years of experience with the Department of Human Services (DHS) as a MedQUEST supervisor and with Outreach Services for two years.

Michelle “Chelle” Jenks has worked with Outreach Services as a Patient Advocate at Wahiawa General Hospital for two years. She assists the hospital’s patients and their families with the Medicaid process. “We keep up-to-date on all the rules and regulations,” Cassandra explained as she described the various types of programs available to those meeting income and asset requirements, or are blind, disabled, or over 65 years of age.

The discussion included information on the various Medicaid programs, Medicaid long term care eligibility, liens on the home property of Medicaid recipients, the QUEST program, Medicaid income and asset eligibility amounts, and other pertinent issues. “Situations all differ, extenuating circumstances exist,” described Cassandra. For that reason, staff members accompany clients to interviews with the Medicaid staff and help with an appeal process, if necessary.

Caregiver Support Groups provide a forum to address these and many others areas of concern for caregivers. Involve yourself in a support group and you will find your journey a little easier and the ability to care for a loved one improved.

Everyone in attendance learned a lot from the speakers and appreciated their very informative presentation. Anyone interested in more information should call Outreach Services at 566-6666.

THE EDEN ALTERNATIVE AT HOME – CARING FOR ELDER

Training Workshop
Sponsored by Project Dana

“We must create a place for our elders that is much more like a garden — the Garden of Eden” thought Dr. Bill Thomas, who had observed the loneliness many of our elders experience. He and his wife Judy founded the Eden Alternative as a life enriching tool to improve the quality of our elders’ lives. The concepts and principles had initially applied to enriching the lives of institutionalized elders. Now, the concepts are available to those caring for elders in the home.

The goal of Eden Alternative At Home is to provide tools to improve the quality of life for the caregiver and for the elder being cared for at home.

The training course, sponsored by Project Dana, will be held at Mililani Hongwanji on Saturdays, September 13, 20, 27, and October 4. The sessions will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. in the temple or the education building.

Anyone interested in registering should contact Karen Oda (623-3131) or Earl Nishimoto (625-2083).

RESPIRE REQUIREMENTS

Respite must not be considered a nice idea. It is an essential part of every caregiver's physical and mental health requirement. And as nice as that may sound—it is not so easy to accomplish. Respite care requires the involvement of others who are capable and willing to render aide and support and provide the opportunity for a caregiver to have a time of respite. But no respite program can work without the caregiver's participation. You must recognize that needing respite is not an acknowledgement of insufficiency but it is a commitment to being able to provide the best level of care possible.

Here are some ideas to help you formulate a respite program that can work in your unique situation:

1. Realistically analyze yourself and your ability to provide care at the level to which you are normally expected. Where do you think your "breaking point" is in this spectrum? Now think about the ideal situation for you caregiving. There is a point in-between reality and fantasy that needs to be your recognized need point for respite. This is going to be different for each caregiver depending on the level of caregiving requirements, the physical capacity for care and the emotional support being received by the caregiver.
2. Once you have identified that critical point, it is time to determine how long a respite period is appropriate. Experts recommend that respite be achieved in varying levels and lengths of time. A frequently-desired respite plan might look like this:

A. Weekly:

4 hour block of time during which someone else is providing for all the caregiving needs and the caregiver may or may not be "in residence". This might be time for reading a good book, taking a long bath, going for a walk, - anything that is completely unconnected with caregiving services. It does not include time to do the shopping needed, time to clean the house, or time to do other tasks that are complicated by caregiving duties. Those tasks require a different form of caregiver-support.

B. Monthly

A weekend—or at least 2 consecutive days during which you are physically absent from caregiving duties. You may need to leave town to achieve total removal from duties and your cell phone needs to be off as well. If an emergency occurs while you are unavailable—the person(s) providing care in your absence must be empowered to deal with whatever arises. If you have another residence—this becomes your hide-a-way. If that does not remove you adequately, you might find a bed and breakfast, a reasonably priced hotel room or even some time with a friend who has some extra space. Use this time to think about yourself, treat yourself to something you cannot enjoy when involved in constant caregiving.

C. Quarterly

This may be financially difficult for many but a 3 day weekend trip to anywhere will do wonders for you. It is just long enough to help you see the other side of reality but not so long as to require the services of a professional or other-wise very experienced caregiver to step in and allow you this time of respite.

D. Annually

Here you have the opportunity to really take control of your caregiving life. Once-a-year, if at all possible, take a full week of off-duty time. Figure out a way to provide the care needed through professional help, church support, trained volunteers. Somehow be able to spend this time for you. You don't have to leave town but the person(s) replacing you must understand the concept of respite well-enough to allow you this time uninterrupted.

Lots of talk is given to respite and not a lot of actual support is provided. So, just like most things in life, if it is going to work you are going to have to do some initial work to set things up.

Carepages.com is a good place to start if you are web-savvy. This free service allows you to set up a schedule that can be accessed by others and coordinated to spread the duties of caregiving among interested persons. Learn how to use this service.

If computers leave you baffled, go get a large block monthly calendar and list all the regular duties that occur each month. List the times that are needed for each task and leave space to identify people who are willing to help shoulder some of the work.

Whatever format you use—schedule in the respite times you are trying to establish. If others understand what your needs are, there is a much better chance of actually or having support or at least knowing specifically what you are trying to achieve. And if developing a respite plan is difficult for you, consult someone who is familiar with respite and let them help you design a plan.
